Teledex iPhones Rated Compliant with Mitel 3300 IP Communications Platform

Company's SIP Offerings Now Available to Wider Range of Hospitality Industry Users

SAN JOSE, Calif. (March 31, 2008) --- Teledex, the leading worldwide provider of guest room telephones for the hospitality industry, announced today it has completed interoperability testing with the Mitel® 3300 IP Communications Platform (ICP) . The Mitel 3300 ICP provides a highly scalable, feature-rich communications system designed to support businesses from 10-65,000 users, and is a highly popular solution with the global hospitality industry.

Now shipping to customers, Teledex iPhone SIP LD4200 display phones and SIP ND2200 series non-display phones are full-featured VoIP phones that enable hoteliers in all segments of the industry to take advantage of the many benefits of IP telephony. Part of the Teledex iPhone family of solutions, these SIP phones match well with other Teledex iPhone products, including the innovative hybrid HD6200 series, Teledex iPhone DECT 6.0 cordless phones, Teledex iPhone 'A' series analog phones, and Teledex iPhone TrimLine phones.

"This interoperability certification from Mitel is another strong show of support from the industry for our Teledex iPhone solutions," says Bill Dunmyer, Teledex vice president of worldwide sales. "As we have moved through the development process with our VoIP initiative, it has always been considered critical that we are compatible with the most popular solutions in the telecom industry. Mitel and Teledex have a long history of partnership and cooperation. We're very pleased that our relationship continues to grow as we bring VoIP to our mutual customers."

"Mitel, a leader in the hospitality industry, understands that hotels are moving to converged infrastructure that require standards based solutions. This interoperability certification clearly demonstrates Mitel's commitment to ensuring our solutions and strategic partners like Teledex and their products enable the customer to select the best of breed solutions to enhance the guest experience," says Michael Poloni, Solutions Marketing Manager for hospitality at Mitel.
